The purpose of this work is to tell in simple fashion, from the inscriptions on the tombs in the Old Historic Cemetery, opposite Government House, the story of Nova Scotians who showed that they knew how to live and how to die. It is a good thing for all to remember the men who have given their lives in war and peace to the service of our country, and to keep in mind their personal achievements in the various crises of her history.

The Setting apart of a Burial Ground.

IN 1749, the old English burial ground, as it was called in early days, was set apart as a general burial place for the inhabitants of the town. It consisted of two acres and a quarter.

The first reference to a burying ground in the early history of Halifax is found in the records of the vestry of St. Paul's Church. The entry reads as follows :

"On the April the 7th, 1760, the sum of £30 was assessed on the inhabitants of the parish, for providing church elements, paying for surplices and fencing the new burying ground."

The ground here referred to was that known as the "Poor House Burial Ground," now converted into a park, on the north side of Spring Garden road and west of Grafton street. The term "new" implies that there had existed another ground which had been used for the purpose, and certain documents, now in the archives of St. Paul's, prove beyond doubt that such ground was that which lies on the west side of Pleasant Street, opposite the present Government House and St. Matthew's Church, being distinctly referred to in the grant as the "old burying ground" and also entitled in the plan attached.

The title remained with the crown until 1794, when it was granted to the church wardens of St. Paul's parish. They have been considered to hold it in trust for the original purpose for which it was dedicated. The old poor house burial ground was also included in this grant.

That a new cemetery should be required at this early date may seem strange, and although the record does not state why a new ground was opened it can plainly be conjectured that the dread of desecration of the dead by the Indians, at that time hostile, induced the church wardens to obtain permission to inter the deceased inhabitants within the parish. The old burial ground being at that time beyond the protection of guards, it is probable that interments ceased there until after the treaty with the savages in 1760. The discontinuance could not have lasted any length of time as is shown by the dates on the old slate head-stones.

Before the present wall and rail were placed round it, the old cemetery was surrounded by a rough stone wall, uncemented, about eight feet high.

Many of the old tombs and head-stones are now falling into ruin, or are broken by being thrown from their places by the action of time and winter thaws. To repair these, and to prevent a further destruction of these historic tomb-stones, donations have been solicited and the public have responded generously.

In Mr. J. J. Stewart's paper on early journalism in Nova Scotia, an obituary notice is reproduced showing the first attempt in that direction made by the local press, and which relates to the husband of the person whose tomb-stone inscription is given above: "On Sunday last, the 20th inst., about twelve o'clock, at noon, departed this life Daniel Shatford, aged 65. He was many years a schoolmaster in New York, from whence he came to this place about the second year after its settlement, and in a short time after set up a school in this town, which he continued to the day of his death, and in which service, notwithstanding his age and infirmities occasioned by the severest afflictions of gout, for a series of years, his assiduity, as well as charity in teaching the poor children gratis, has been equalled by few, and perhaps exceeded by none. He hath left, besides his own distressed family, a great number of scholars, both infants as well as grown people, to lament this public loss."

German school, the Prince always took a warm interest in his young military friends and watched over their welfare with fatherly interest. Of this Sir Brenton Haliburton bears testimony.

Here lieth the body of

Many years storekeeper of His Majesty's Ordnance
at Halifax.

He served in the army until the peace of 1763 when He retired from ill health.

He was a brave officer,
The best of Fathers and Friend.
He died 29th October, 1792, aged 54.

In reading this inscription, the deeds of Wolfe and his brave army at once recur to the mind. "He served in the army until the peace of 1763. Parkman, in his Montcalm and Wolfe, glowingly depicted the struggles which won for Great Britain this Canada of ours," in which this brave soldier of the French wars took part. A flat, sandstone slab, on the north side of the cemetery, marks the last "camping ground" of this soldier.

His daughter married, in 1788, John Butler Dight, who was nephew and heir to Hon. John Butler, of H. M. Council. The late Col. Butler, of Windsor, N. S., was a child of this marriage.

Here lies the body of
JAMES SLAYTER,
who departed this life May 11th, 1761, aged 7 years and 20 days.

Here lies the body of
MR. JOSEPH SLAYTER,
son of Mr. John Slayter and Mrs. Jane Slayter, died May 20, 1763, aged 28 years.

This Tomb
is by filial affection raised to the memory of JOHN SLAYTER, ESQ.,
who died 18th Nov. 1824, aged 74 years.
Nearly fifty years of which had been employed

This Stone,

Sacred to the Memory of

LIEUTENANT BENJAMIN JAMES,
of His Majesty's Royal Nova Scotia regiment, who lost his life in the attempt to render assistance to the La Tribune Frigate on the 25th of November, 1797, aged

24 years,

Is placed as a testimony of the high sense entertained of his spirited and humane exertions on that memorable occasion, by

Lieut. General His Royal Highness

PRINCE EDWARD,

Commanding the District.

The La Tribune was a frigate, carrying 44 guns, lately captured from the French, commanded by Captain Barker, and on her way from Tor Bay to Quebec—acting as convoy to a fleet. But, becoming detached from her charge, she bore up for Halifax. Rev. Dr. Hill remarks in his memoir of Sir Brenton Haliburton: "This story has sometimes been erroneously narrated." And as Sir Brenton was at the time of the disaster the officer in charge of York Redoubt, and an eye witness of what occurred, having aided in the attempt to save the ship, I have taken the liberty of adapting the report as contained in this memoir by Dr. Hill:

"Early in the morning of November 23rd, 1797, Mr. Haliburton was standing on the top of the abrupt elevation on which the fort is built, looking out toward the sea. It was a dark, autumnal day and the rising wind blew freshly from the E. S. E. Above and beneath were signs of a coming storm. Beside him stood Sergt. McCormac, who addressed Mr. Haliburton as they were both watching a ship approach: 'If that ship does not alter her course, sir, she will be ashore within a quarter of an hour.' His prediction was truly fulfilled, within five minutes she was stranded upon Thrum Cap Shoals. It is generally supposed that the wind was blowing violently and a heavy sea was raging. This, however, was not the case. The gale was but in its infancy. It was the well-satisfied opinion of the master that caused the stranding of the ship.

"As early as 8 o'clock she had made the harbor, and running before a fair wind was rapidly nearing it. The captain suggested to the sailing master the propriety of engaging a harbor pilot to conduct the vessel in. But that officer replied that there was no necessity as he knew the harbor well. The captain, fully confiding in the master's skill and knowledge, went below to arrange his papers. Now it so occurred that there was on board a negro named John Casy, who had formerly belonged to Halifax—to this man the master looked for assistance in piloting the vessel to her anchorage. But he misplaced his trust. About 9 o'clock the ship approached so near Thrum Cap Shoals that the master himself became alarmed and sent for Mr. Galvin, an officer holding the rank of master's mate, who was simply a passenger on board the Tribune. This gentleman, who knew the harbor well, had offered to pilot the ship, but his offer had been refused, and, not being well, he retired to the cabin. On being summoned, however, he hastened on deck; his opinion was asked, but before he could give it the noble ship was stranded on the shoals.

Signals of distress were immediately made to the military posts and to the ships in the harbor. Mr. Halliburton, whose station was nearest proceeded at once on board, and presenting himself to the captain he enquired what aid he could render. The captain replied, the only thing you can do is to signal to the Dockyard for help. Calling to his boat's crew, he at once proceeded to the station to see to the transmission of the message. The signal staff immediately repeated the facts and the danger, the message was acknowledged, and everything apparently put in fair train for meeting the emergency. Boats were manned both at the Dockyard and at the Engineers' Yard, whilst others proceeded from several of the military posts near at hand. Among the boats that reached the ship was that in which were three officers, Lieutenants North and Campbell of the 7th Royal Fusiliers, and Lieutenant James, belonging to the Royal Nova Scotia regiment. While these gentlemen were on board it grew dark. In order to lighten the ship, the guns were thrown over, but by a fatal mistake, in the hurry and confusion, they were thrown over on the leeward side. With the rising tide and increasing gale the ship, lightened by the removal of her guns, floated from the reef, to be driven upon the iron bottom and pounded until she sprang a leak. At half-past eight the Tribune was afloat, but her rudder was unshipped and lost. After floating in a helpless condition for a time, it was discovered that she had seven feet of water in her hold. Captain Barker, indignant that no officer higher than a boatswain had been sent from the Dockyard, would not take that official's advice, but now perceiving his danger took it later and let go his best bow anchor in 13 fathoms of water, it parted, and the mizzen was cut away. It was now ten o'clock, with the gale increasing in fury when Lieutenants North and Campbell left the ship, but James could not be found at that moment. It has been stated that Captain Barker refused to permit any of the crew or passengers to leave the ship owing to a brother officer been cashiered sometime previously, being placed in a similar position, he allowed the persons on board his ship to save themselves. This is the reason given why so many people perished who had ample time to be removed before the catastrophe which overtook the ship occurred. Be this as it may, the fact remains that by the sudden sinking of the La Tribune two hundred and forty souls were thrown into the boiling waters—men, women and children—to sink into its depths or to be dashed to pieces against the cliffs at Herring Cove head. When the ship sank, the tops of her fore and main mast remained some few feet above the sea, to these clung about some forty wretches in wild despair. Through that night of storm and terror the cries of those who remained in the tops could be heard by watchers on the shore. Towards morning the mainmast gave way, but the foremast still held out, to which some eight of the survivors still clung.

"At daylight, these few remaining of all that ship's company could be observed from the shore, but so wild was the sea that not one of the watchers dare launch a boat to attempt a rescue. Towards eleven o'clock, a mere lad, who could no longer endure to see the poor wretches still clinging to the upright spar, made an attempt to rescue them. With the aid of the men on shore he launched his skiff and, with a heroism that must have put his elders to shame, he pulled boldly out to the sunken vessel and brought two of the survivors to land. He then attempted to return, but the exertion was too great for his strength and he returned to the shore. But his example now spurred on those on shore to make an attempt to rescue the remaining six, which was accomplished. The boy was afterwards entered on one of H. HON. BENJAMIN GREEN, ESQ., who departed this life

17th Oct., 1770, in the 60th year of his age.

He was of a public spirit and a great encourager of the good of the town and province, from the settlement of which to his death, and was employed in the principal offices of the Government with honor to himself and the approbation of all.

MARGARET NEWTON,
daughter of the Hon. Benjamin Green, Esq., wife to

JOHN NEWTON, ESQ..

Born Oct., 1738. Died 3rd of Dec., 1767.

Benjamin Green, Jr., who succeeded his father in the office of treasurer of the province, died suddenly on December 2, 1793. He was an uncle of Captain Parker, who was killed in the Crimea, and whose name appears on the Lion Monument. Mr. Green was at Louisburg with Amherst and Wolfe's army, as his father had been when the provincial troops captured that stronghold of French power in America. The Greens were of a prominent commercial family in Massachusetts.

Sacred to the Memory of

MR. JOHN SAMWELL,

Midshipman of H. M. S. Shannon,

Who died at the Naval Hospital, on the 13th of June, 1813, aged 18 years. Also,

MR. WILLIAM STEVENS,

Boatswain, of the same ship, who died there on 19th of June, 1813, aged 36 years.

Those brave officers closed their career in consequence of desperate wounds received in the gallant action between their own ship and the American frigate, Chesapeake, on the 1st of June, 1813, which ended in the capture of the enemy's ship in 14 minutes.

The families of Captain Broke and young Samwell were intimate, as a letter to her husband from Lady Broke, while he was still suffering from his wounds at Halifax, intimates. She says, referring to a report in the newspapers of that day, concerning the engagement: "Lord Melville thought so highly of the action, or rather of yourself and the officers of the Shannon, that, as a mark of it, the two surviving lieutenants are to be promoted to commanders, and the two middies, who boarded, are to be lieutenants of the Shannon, to replace the above. I cannot help hoping that Samwell is one. I shall rejoice if it prove true." At the time of her son's death, Mrs. Samwell resided at Plymouth, England. On July the 11, 1813, Lady Broke (her husband not yet knighted) writes to her husband as follows: "I sent a few lines to you yesterday by good Mrs. Samwell to Plymouth, as she was obliged to return home, and I was anxious you should know I received your letters, my love, to 12th June."

On the last named date, the brig Nova Scotia, commanded by Lieut. B. Kent, left Halifax with the official account of the fight.

William Stevens, the boatswain of the Shannon, was a veteran in naval warfare, and had fought with Rodney. When he received the wound, from which his death resulted, he was in the act of lashing the ships together. A cannon ball carried his right arm away.

THE FUNERAL OF CAPT. LAWRENCE.

A celebrated American writer, commenting on the honors paid to the brave Lawrence, at Halifax, says: "His obsequies were celebrated with appropriate ceremonials and affecting solemnity. His pall was supported by the oldest captains in the British service that were in Halifax, and the naval officers crowded to yield the last sad honors to a man who was late their foe, but now their foe no longer. There is a sympathy between gallant souls that knows no distinction of clime or nation."

This odd inscription is on a freestone, near the Pleasant Street front of the cemetery. It is a sly thrust at the medical profession. It reads as follows :

In 1813, the following appears in a Halifax paper of that date : "Among the brave officers who have lately fallen in the service of their king and country, we find the names of Major Despard, 7th Regt. ; Capt. Here lies the body of JOHN WALLACE,
son to Michael Wallace, merchant of Halifax.
Born June 26th, 1774; departed April 21st, 1775, aged 10 months.

Here lies the body of
ANDREW WALLACE.
Merchant in Halifax, who departed this life
8th Aug't, 1789, aged 39 years.

Michael Wallace was a native of Scotland, and had resided in one of the Southern States as a merchant; but being a loyalist he emigrated to Nova Scotia, where he continued in trade until appointed Treasurer of the Province. Michael Wallace left numerous descendants. John Wallace, Esq., of the Dominion Savings Bank is descended from him. Some of his other children are buried in Camp Hill cemetery.

WILLIAM BOWIE,

Died 21st July, 1819, aged 37 years.

Strict integrity and a high sense of honor rendered him respected as a merchant, a warm, benevolent, social disposition made him beloved

This stone is erected by his friends in testimony of their esteem for his virtues and regret for their loss.

The deceased lost his life in a duel with R. J. Uniacke, Jr., who afterwards was a Judge of the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia. He took umbrage at some remarks made by Uniacke, in the course of a trial in which he was interested. This led to a duel between them on Wednesday, 21st July, 1819, in which Bowie fell mortally wounded. The Grove, at Richmond, was the place of combat. This was the only instance of a fatal duel in Halifax. The survivor and the two seconds were tried for this on Wednesday, 28th April, the following year, and acquitted. It was said that the duel was not of young Uniacke's seeking, but the murderous code of honor of that day left no other way than to accept the challenge. Both young men were popular among their immediate friends and associates.

Sacred to the memory of MARY,
wife of Captain James Crichton, who departed this life on the 24th April, 1819,

Also ANNIE, eldest daughter of the above named,
died Oct. 24, 1843, aged 24 years.

John Fraser was the grandfather of J. Watson Fraser, of the Herald and Mail staff, and of Charles Fraser, of the Post Office department, Halifax. The firm of Grant & Fraser did a large tailoring and clothing business.

CHOLERA.

This disorder raged most violently and destructively, and burials were so frequent that the carts went about, with men calling upon the people to bring out their dead. The streets were deserted, and barrels of tar were set to burn at the street corners, to fumigate the city and destroy the germs.

In the confined places and narrow alleys and their vicinity, in poor and dirty houses and amongst intemperate, imprudent people, and women of bad character, it raged fiercely—carrying off great numbers very suddenly.

To the Memory of MICHAEL HEAD, ESQ.,
who died June 18th, 1805, aged 66 years.
For upwards of forty years in this province.

Michael Head was the father of Samuel Head, M. D., a prominent Halifax physician in the early decades of the 19th century, and of Capt. Head, of H. M. S. Curlew. He was a physician, and his residence was opposite St. Paul's Church. One of his daughters married the Rev. Archibald Gray, D. D., of St. Matthew's Church, and father of James J. Gray, for a number of years clerk of the House of Assembly.

SAMUEL HRAID, M. D.,

who died November, 1853, aged 64 years.

For nearly 35 years he successfully practiced as a physician, and faithfully executed his duties as a magistrate.

His benevolent kindness in his various duties will be long and gratefully remembered by his family, his numerous patients, friends, and also by the poor of Halifax, to whom he was a most bountiful benefactor and humane physician.

This honest man, after discharging every public and private duty, closed a long and exemplary life; died on the 31st day of August, 1825, aged 76 years.

Charles Hill was an opulent merchant. He was appointed a member of H. M. Council in 1801. In the list of shares, for a proposed Halifax bank, the name of Charles Hill appears for 23 shares.

Sacred to the memory of
ANN CREIGHTON,

who departed this life on the 20th day of June, in the year of our Lord 1837, aged 64 years.

She was the last of the children of James Creighton Senr., one of the original settlers of the Province.

James Creighton was the ancestor of the Creighton family who still reside in Halifax and Dartmouth. He should not be confounded with that Lieut. Creighton, colonel of militia, at Lunenburg; also an original settler, who came to Halifax in the same ship, and who was his friend. James Creighton, senr's, residence was situated on the site of Trinity Church Jacob Street, which was in early days the site of a blockhouse or fort. It was called Grenadier fort.

Also, in memory of

who departed this life, July 11th, 1790, aged 73 years.

This stone was erected by the request of Rufus and Ann Fairbanks, in memory of JOSEPH,

their first-born, who departed this life Oct. 10, 1788, aged 1 year & 10 months.

Also, to

JOSEPH PRESCOTT,

their second son, who departed this life, 11th Sept., 1799, aged 12 months.

Joseph Fairbanks was from Massachusetts. He was one of the representatives in the first House of Assembly, summoned 1788. His nephew, Mr. Rufus Fairbanks, became heir to all his property in Halifax, which was very considerable. Mr. Rufus Fairbanks was for many years one of the magistrates of Halifax. He married a daughter of Charles Prescott, sister of Mr. Charles Prescott, of Cornwallis, and was father of the Hon. John E. Fairbanks, of the firm of Fairbanks & McNab, of the Hon. Charles R. Fairbanks, master of the rolls, and Samuel P. Fairbanks, Commissioner of Crown Lands, 1866.

wife of Samuel Cunard, departed this life 2nd February, 1848, aged 33 years.

Mr. Cunard, afterwards Sir Samuel, was of Loyalist descent. He was the founder of the celebrated Cunard Steamship Company, and the originator of continuous steam navigation between England and her dependencies on this continent.

Here lieth the body of

wife of Mr. John Best, who departed this life, June 23rd, 1773, aged 22 years.

William Best was one of the first representatives of the General Assembly of the province. The above inscription refers probably to the wife of one of the same family.

CHARLES SAWYER.

who died 1 March A. D. 1833, aged 3 years & 3 months.

John James Sawyer was sheriff of Halifax for a number of years. He married a daughter of Hon. Michael Tobin, and was a brother-in-law to the late Sir William Young, Chief Justice of Nova Scotia. The house at the southeast corner of Tobin and Pleasant streets, was his residence.

To the memory of the above named
JACOB MILLER,

who departed this life, the 31st day of May, 1838,
aged 80 years.

The Millers were an old Halifax family. Miller's wharf and dock, foot of Morris street, was their property, and the house, just south, on Water street. The fields and wood adjoining the Park, were also included in the Miller estate. The late Jacob and Garrett Miller were sons of Jacob and Elizabeth Miller.

Here lies interred the body of MALACHIY SALTER, ESQ., who departed this life, Jan. 13th, A. D. 1781, ætat 64 years.

"The wise, the good, the pious and the brave Live in their death, and flourish in the grave."

Mr. Salter was a native of New England. He was extensively engaged in the fishery, and had frequently visited Chebucto harbor before the settlement. The old house, corner of Hollis and Salter streets (now owned by the Telephone Co.), was built by Malachi Salter, and he resided in it at the time of his death.

The late Benjamin Salter was a grandson, and some of his descendants still reside in Halifax. At the time of the American revolution, Mr. Salter and several natives of New England fell under suspicion of being in sympathy with the colonists then in arms against Great Britain. Their advocacy of the liberty of the people to control the fiscal policy of the province lead to this doubt of their loyalty.

and died in Halifax, on the 5th Oct., 1819.

William Lawson, for many years a member of the provincial assembly, and a prominent merchant of this city, was one of his sons. Robert and Henry Lawson, who did business many years in Halifax, were also sons. Late William Lawson, of the firm of Lawson & Harrington, was a grandson.

Sacred to the memory of
THE HON. STEADMAN RAWLINS,
President of His Majesty's Council, in the Island of St. Christopher, who died May 31st, 1836, in the 47th year of his age.

THE LOYALISTS.

The loyalists who settled in Halifax, and who are interred in the old cemetery, were principally men of standing and intelligence. The majority of them were from Massachusetts, and some held office under the crown in that colony. Foster Hutchinson, for instance, was a brother of that Lieutenant Governor Hutchinson who, on the passing of the Stamp Act, suffered from the excesses of the mob, at Boston, when they levelled the stamp office and wrecked the house of the stamp distributor. At that time the mansion of the governor was destroyed; his plate, his furniture, his pictures, and his fine library were plundered and burnt, and the owner barely escaped with his life. Many of them were graduates of Harvard College, and belonged to the legal profession. A few were from Rhode Island and New Jersey, and were in arms for the crown. Loyalists of this class opposed the coercive methods of George III. and his ministers, and up to a certain point were with the people in their efforts to obtain redress of grievances by constitutional means. Hutchinson, Governor of Massachusetts, whose reputation long lay buried under patriotic vituperation, has now justice done him by fair minded writers, and is allowed to have been himself a patriot, taking a line opposite to Samuel Adams, and seeking to the utmost of his power peace with justice. These men were opposed to revolution, as were, in the outset, a large majority of the people. They were the leaders of the party that adhered to the crown, and when they were expelled that party were without leaders and without organization. Still, in the struggle which ensued, as many as twenty-five thousand loyalists were in arms for the crown, and, as a writer on this question remarks, "a number sufficient to give the conflict the character of a civil war between the parties in America, as well as between the British and American sections of the Anglo-Saxon race." But the unwise violence of the Loyalist leaders and, afterwards, by the blunders of the commanders and the excesses of his mercenary troops, the numbers of his party were much reduced. When Howe evacuated Boston, the royal fleet took with it, according to Mr. Sabine, eleven hundred loyalists, including women and children—the first instalment of a great loyalist migration. The number included, of members of the council and officials, one hundred and two; of clergymen, eighteen; of inhabitants of country towns, one hundred and five; of merchants and other residents in Boston, two hundred and thirteen; of farmers, mechanics and traders, three hundred and eighty-two. A writer on the political history of the United States says: "The case of these people is not to be settled, nor is the witness which they bore to their cause to be annulled by designating them Tories. Was it just that they should be outlawed, pillaged, driven from their homes, maltreated, condemned to the death of traitors by men who had but yesterday been conspirators, outwardly professing allegiance to the government to which the loyalists adhered, and were still without any recognized government of their own?"

In the old "North Church" burying ground (the Boston church made famous by Longfellow and other American writers) the Hutchinson family tombs are to be found, carved with heraldic emblazonments. These inscriptions on the tombs of a whole family, in St. Paul's cemetery, tell a sad tale of proscription, and exile in a strange land:

Here are also interred the remains of JOANNA HUTCHINSON,
who died April 17, 1825.

Under this stone rests the remains of FOSTER HUTCHINSON, ESQ., one of the judges of the Supreme Court of the Province of Nova Scotia, and a member of His Majesty's Council.
He died on the 25th day of November, 1815,
in the 54th year of his age.

He was a most amiable man, and a learned and upright judge. He was not of a robust constitution, and had never married. James Stewart, solicitor general, was given his seat on the bench.

An inscription, on a freestone tablet, records
a name familiar to the readers of Nova Scotia history. It is that of the brother of Colonel John Winslow. The inscription reads as follows:

Sacred to the memory of
EDWARD WINSLOW, ESQ., who died the 9th of June, 1784, in the 74th year of his age.

Descended from a race of ancestors, governors of the ancient colony of Plymouth. He, in no instance, degenerated from their loyalty or virtue, but while he filled the first offices became conspicuous by public integrity, as he was amiable in the milder shade of private life.

Although his fortune suffered shipwreck in the storm of civil war from an attachment to his sovereign, neither his cheerful manner nor his calm of conscious rectitude forsook him in old age.
He died as he lived, beloved by his friends and respected by his enemies.

Edward Winslow was a brother of that Col.
Winslow, who took so prominent a part in the removal of the Acadians from this province.
The district assigned to him was Grand Pre, and most thoroughly did he perform the melancholy duty.

The Winslows were forced to leave fortune and position in New England, at the commencement of the Revolution, to follow the British standard to Nova Scotia. Edward Winslow had been a mandamus councillor of Massachusetts, and, owing to the violence of the insurgent party in that colony, was compelled to leave his native land. This branch of the Winslow family were overtaken by the same fate that met the expatriated Acadians, and, in this instance, the tragedy of 1755 was revenge by the people who were the prime instigators of that sad affair.

His son, Lieut. Colonel Winslow, was also a Massachusetts loyalist, and, at the evacuation of Boston, 1776, left for New York, where he was appointed Muster Master General of the North American regiments. He held this position to the close of the war, when he came to Halifax, as secretary to the commander-in-chief, General Campbell. He afterwards settled in York county, New Brunswick, and held important offices in that province, dying, 1815, a judge of the supreme court. Some of the Winslow family still reside in New Brunswick, at Woodstock principally.

In the memory of
MRS. MARTHA HOWE,
wife of Mr. J. Howe, who died Nov. 25th, 1790, aged 20 years
And his two daughters,
SARAH HOWE,
who died June, 1783, Et. 10 months
and

MRS. MARTHA SENTELL, who died Jan. 19, 1799, et. 19 years.
"Lean not on the earth, 'twill pierce thee to the heart."

John Howe came to Halifax when the British evacuated Boston, 17th March, 1776. With him came Mrs. Draper, who continued to publish the old Boston News Letter, after her husband's death, and kept it staunch and loyal to the empire until her departure with the troops.

John Howe was born in Boston, October 14th, 1754. His father's name was Joseph Howe, a reputable tradesman, in Marshal's Lane. He was a junior partner with Mrs.
Draper, in the News Letter, who gave him the oversight of the printing office. He was in the discharge of his duty when the rebels besieged Boston, in the autumn of 1775. When the evacuation was determined upon, the March following, Howe took with him Miss Martha Minna, a young girl of 16, to whom he was engaged, and was married to her at Newport, on the way to Halifax. Some time after his arrival in Halifax he commenced the publication of the Halifax Journal, January 5th, 1781.

The Journal remained the property of the Howe family until 1810. John Howe was King's printer, postmaster of Halifax, and deputy postmaster general for the province. John Howe's second wife was a Mrs. Mary Austen. Hon. Joseph Howe was a child of this marriage.

Resurget.

SOPHIA,

wife of W. Minns. Died Sept. 5th, 1826,
aged 51 years.

William Minns was but a mere lad when he came to Halifax with the other loyal Bostonians. Four years after the establishment of the Journal, he set type for his brother-in-law, John Howe. The Weekly Chronicle was established by Mr. Minns; he also kept a stationer's shop, on Barrington Street—his grandson, James Godfrey, still occupies his old residence, opposite the City Hall. People are still living who remember Mr. Minns, a dignified, portly gentleman, with powdered wig, worsted stockings and silver-buckled shoes. For several years before his death, he was a justice of commissioners.

This Stone is placed in affectionate remembrance of

THE HON. JOHN HALLIBURTON,

Many years surgeon of the Naval Hospital, at Halifax. Member of His Majesty's Council, Province of Nova Scotia, ætat 68.

If unshaken loyalty to his king, steady attachment to his friends, active benevolence to the destitute, and if humble confidence in his God can perpetuate his memory, he will not be forgotten.

In the year 1750, the town of Newport was visited by a frigate, commanded by Lord Colville. On board, acting as surgeon of the ship, was Dr. John Halliburton. He was the son of a Presbyterian minister, who was in charge of a church at Haddington, Scotland. Whilst the ship rode at anchor he became acquainted with the family of the Hon. Jahleel Brenton, whose son was so well known in the British navy, Admiral J. Brenton. Dr. Halliburton became attached to one of Mr. Brenton's daughters, and after completing his stipulated term of service as naval surgeon, he returned to Rhode Island, and was married to Susannah Brenton, on the 4th of January, in the year 1767. This alliance caused him to adopt the colony of Rhode Island as his home, and follow his profession among his newly found friends and acquaintances. When open hostilities commenced, between Great Britain and the colonies, Dr. Halliburton was banished with other loyalists, for refusing to subscribe to the test ordered by the revolutionary assembly.

The place of his banishment was Hopkinton, and there he remained until September, 1776, when it was voted that he and Dr. Hunter have leave to return to Newport until the October term of the assembly. This privilege was granted, however, not out of consideration to themselves, but because their services, as physicians, were much needed by the inhabitants. The forbearance thus shown lasted but a short time, and he was finally compelled to sacrifice all his property, which ability and application had enabled him to accumulate, and escape from the town. On the pretext of visiting patients on the mainland, Dr. Halliburton secretly left Newport in a barge, from Castle Hill (the estate of the Hon. J. Brenton), landing safely at Long Island, where the British army was stationed. On his arrival at headquarters, he presented himself to Sir Henry Clinton, who (as some small recognition of his services) offered him the headship of the naval medical department in that city or in Halifax. He sailed in a British ship, soon after, from New York, having accepted the position of surgeon in the naval hospital here, and arrived at his destination in 1782.

His wife and family followed him in the succeeding spring.

Chief Justice Halliburton was a son of Dr. Halliburton. Descendants of his daughter, Mary, I believe, are still living in Halifax, but none of the male line exist in Halifax.

Sacred to the memory of

BENJAMIN KENT,

Late of Boston, New England,
Barrister-at-Law,

who died on the 22nd day of October, 1783,
in the 81st year of his age.

And of

ELIZABETH KENT,

his wife,

who died on the 2nd day of August, 1802,
in the 80th year of her age.

Benjamin Kent was father-in-law to Chief Justice Blowers, a distinguished loyalist of Boston, who settled in Halifax. Mr. Kent was a minister of a Congregationalist church, at Marlborough, Mass., for a short time, but entered upon the profession of the law at Boston. He was a whig, it appears, for a while, and his name appears among these of Samuel Adams, Cushing, Hancock and other prominent men of the patriotic band. He was eccentric and a wit. His conduct as a clergyman is said to have been unclerical and humorous.

THE MILITARY.

In that portion of the Old Cemetery reserved for the military, a head-stone records the last camping ground of one of Wellington's soldiers. One who marched and fought from the lines of Torres Vedras to Waterloo; who belonged to a period, as a recent writer puts it, "when war had much more of the picturesque and human element" than it has to-day. "Brown Bess" was short of range and the fighting lines came so near to each other that each man could see his foe's face, and hear, too, the shout or oath. In reading the inscription that tells of the last resting place of this hero of that famous army that conquered the French, led by Napoleon's ablest marshals and generals, we recall what we have read of the valor that raged at the great breach of Badajos or swept up the slope of rugged stones at San Sebastian. Here is the record:

Sacred to the memory of
JAMES SINCLAIR,

Late Qr. Mr. Sergeant 73th Regiment, who died 18th of November, 1824, aged 48 years.
He served His Majesty 24 years, fought ten general actions with the regiment under the Duke of Wellington, and was twice wounded.

Erected as a tribute of respect by the now commissioned officers of the regiment.

on the 21st Sept., 1814, was consigned to the earth the body of

MAJOR GEN. ROSS,

who, after having distinguished himself in all ranks as an officer in Egypt, Italy, Portugal, Spain and America, was killed at the commencement of an action which resulted in the defeat and flight of the troops of the United States near Baltimore, on the 12th Sept., 1814.

At Rostrevor,

the seat of the family in Ireland, a monument more worthy of his memory has been erected by the noblemen and gentlemen of his county, and the officers of a gallant army which under his conduct attacked and dispersed the Americans, at Bladensburg, on the 24th Aug., 1814, and on the same day victoriously entered Washington, the capital of the U. S.

In St. Paul's,

a monument has also been erected to his memory by his country.

The victorious army, under Gen. Winder, destroyed the public buildings at Washington and the bridge over the Potomac, an act for which they were blamed by many.

The bodies of Major General Ross and Captain Sir Peter Parker were brought to Halifax from the United States on H. M. S. Tonnant. On the 29th of September, 1814, the funeral of Gen. Ross took place. The late William Roach, father of William Roach, M. P., witnessed the burial ceremony, when a boy, and has graphically described it in the Acadian Recorder years after. He says: "The body was landed at the King's wharf, under a discharge of half-minute guns from the flagship. The coffin was received by the grenadier company of the 64th Regiment, at salute arms. The funeral cortege proceeded to St. Paul's church. The streets, from the King's wharf to the church, were lined with troops on either side. Military bands played the dead march in Saul. The funeral service at the church was performed by his lordship the Bishop of Nova Scotia, and the remains were followed to the grave by a large number of military and naval officers, members of the government, and a large concourse of the most respectable inhabitants of the town. Nothing could be more solemn and impressive than this procession from the landing at the King's wharf to the close. The old grave yard, opposite Government House, was crowded with spectators to overflowing to witness the last sad rites paid to this brave and famous soldier."

In this old cemetery are buried the remains of some of the heroes of the Anglo-American war of 1812-15, as the following inscription will show:

Sacred to the memory of
RICHARD SMITH, ESQ.,

This young man served nearly the whole of the late American war upon the Niagara frontier in His Majesty's 104th Regt. In an attack on Fort Erie, this brave man led the forlorn hope. During the performance of this arduous and dangerous duty he received five wounds, one of which occasioned the loss of his right arm. The exemplary conduct of the deceased was the means of his being chosen and appointed as magistrate for the county of Northumberland, Province of New Brunswick.

THE ATTACK ON FORT ERIE.

The fort was assailed by storm, two hours before daylight, on the morning of September 23, 1814. By means of scaling ladders, one division of the British got into the fort and took possession of the guns, both of which it kept for an hour a half, under a most tremendous fire of grape and musketry from a stone building in the fort, which the enemy had made into a block house. The enemy had, likewise, a force entrenched strongly outside of the fort, who, finding they could not drive out the British from their position, laid the plan of blowing them up, which they effectually did by springing a mine. The British loss was immense: 1 colonel, 1 lieutenant-colonel, 1 major, 12 captains, 15 lieutenants, 4 ensigns, 1 adjutant, 1 master, 1 midshipman, 62 sergeants, 7 drummers, 799 rank and file. Lieut. Colonel Drummond, of Smith's regiment, was killed.

Beneath this stone is deposited the body of

HONORABLE CHARLES F. NORTON,

late Captain in H. M. 52nd Light Infantry, and Military Secretary to His Excellency Major General Sir Colin Campbell, K. C. B., who died, after a short illness, on the 28th of October, 1835, aged 28 years.

His bereaved relatives have raised this tomb to mark the spot which holds the mortal remains of one deservedly dear to them and early snatched away.

The deceased was brother to Fletcher, Baron Grantly, and son-in-law to His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor.

Fletcher, Baron Grantly was married to the grand-daughter of the Right Hon. Richard Brinsley Sheridan, and aunt of late Earl Dufferin, at one time governor general of Canada. Hon. Mrs. Norton won fame as a poetess, which extended to both hemispheres. Captain Norton, his brother, was said by those who knew him to be a very handsome man. He was a fine, tall, young man of ruddy complexion. When on duty, in the dead of winter, he contracted a severe cold which soon developed into pneumonia, and his death followed in a few days.

In memory of

wife of Hugh W. Blackadar, who died the 22nd August, 1839, aged 29 years.

Also, Her Mother,

LYDIA SHARPLES,

who died May 19th, 1834, aged 54 years.

The deceased was the first wife of Hugh W. Blackadar, proprietor and publisher of the Acadian Recorder, but was not the mother of the present Postmaster and Charles Blackadar, publisher of The Daily Evening Recorder.

Here rests the body of
JOHN STIRLING,

Surgeon, R. N.,

who departed this life, 20th December, 1837, aged 52 years.

I believe he was father of the late Mr. Snelling Stirling, manager of the Union Bank, Halifax, who was, through the Snellings, a descendant of Paul Mascarene, governor at Annapolis.
